An exciting opportunity to qualify as a 'DVM' in Scotland

For further information contact:
Joyce Wason, Director of Admissions & Student Services Manager:
joyce.wason@glasgow.ac.uk
Tel: +44 141 330 2225
Or
Professor Neil Evans: neil.evans@glasgow.ac.uk
Tel: +44 141 330 5795

www.glasgow.ac.uk/schools/vet

An international veterinary medicine education in Scotland

For further information contact:
Joyce Wason, Director of Admissions & Student Services Manager:
joyce.wason@glasgow.ac.uk
Tel: +44 141 330 2225
Or
Professor Neil Evans: neil.evans@glasgow.ac.uk
Tel: +44 141 330 5795

www.glasgow.ac.uk/schools/vet
Would I be able to work as a veterinary student in North America after I graduate from the BVMS programme at the University of Glasgow? Yes – the World is your Oystar! – You will be more than DVM!

The University of Glasgow’s School of Veterinary Medicine is internationally renowned and has a strong reputation for offering high-quality veterinary education. Its BVMS programme is one of the leading programmes in the world, with a focus on small and large animal medicine, companion animal medicine, and veterinary public health.

University of Glasgow, School of Veterinary Medicine DVM Programme

The programme is delivered over five years and includes both classroom and clinical training. The first four years are focused on core clinical skills, while the final year is dedicated to electives and research.

At which university will I be registered for my Vet FEEPASS year?

The Vet FEEPASS year is a facilitated entry to the second year of the BVMS programme. Students who are accepted into the programme will have the opportunity to gain recognition of credits based on assessments completed during the Vet FEEPASS year. During this time, students will be enrolled at the University of Glasgow School of Veterinary Medicine.

Would I need to apply through VMCAS to join the BVMS programme and the Vet FEEPASS year?

No, you will not have to apply through VMCAS to join the BVMS programme. Students who are accepted into the programme will have the opportunity to gain recognition of credits based on assessments completed during the Vet FEEPASS year. The programme is delivered over five years and includes both classroom and clinical training.

Follow In The Footsteps Of James Herriot

(And following satisfactory completion of your studies, a guaranteed place in an AVMA accredited veterinary school)

The University of Glasgow, School of Veterinary Medicine FEEPASS Programme (Facilitated Early Entry Programme for Animal Science Students)

The University of Glasgow, School of Veterinary Medicine FEEPASS Programme is offered to high-quality animal science students who wish to study veterinary medicine, within the global context. The programme provides recognised credits, that will allow completion of the student’s animal science degree from their home institution and guaranteed entry to year 2 of the University of Glasgow’s BVMS programme.

This reduces the total duration of study required to become a DVM through UK Schools to 8 years, which is comparable to schools in the USA and has associated cost benefits.

Would I need to apply through VMCAS to join the BVMS programme and the Vet FEEPASS year?

No, you will not have to apply through VMCAS to join the BVMS programme. Students who are accepted into the programme will have the opportunity to gain recognition of credits based on assessments completed during the Vet FEEPASS year.

At which university will I be registered for my Vet FEEPASS year?

The Vet FEEPASS year is a facilitated entry to the second year of the BVMS programme. Students who are accepted into the programme will have the opportunity to gain recognition of credits based on assessments completed during the Vet FEEPASS year. During this time, students will be enrolled at the University of Glasgow School of Veterinary Medicine.

Follow In The Footsteps Of James Herriot

(And following satisfactory completion of your studies, a guaranteed place in an AVMA accredited veterinary school)

The University of Glasgow, School of Veterinary Medicine FEEPASS Programme (Facilitated Early Entry Programme for Animal Science Students)

The University of Glasgow, School of Veterinary Medicine FEEPASS Programme is offered to high-quality animal science students who wish to study veterinary medicine, within the global context. The programme provides recognised credits, that will allow completion of the student’s animal science degree from their home institution and guaranteed entry to year 2 of the University of Glasgow’s BVMS programme.

This reduces the total duration of study required to become a DVM through UK Schools to 8 years, which is comparable to schools in the USA and has associated cost benefits.

Would I be able to work as a veterinary student in North America after I graduate from the BVMS programme at the University of Glasgow? Yes – the World is your Oystar! – You will be more than DVM!

The University of Glasgow’s School of Veterinary Medicine is internationally renowned and has a strong reputation for offering high-quality veterinary education. Its BVMS programme is one of the leading programmes in the world, with a focus on small and large animal medicine, companion animal medicine, and veterinary public health.

University of Glasgow, School of Veterinary Medicine DVM Programme

The programme is delivered over five years and includes both classroom and clinical training. The first four years are focused on core clinical skills, while the final year is dedicated to electives and research.

At which university will I be registered for my Vet FEEPASS year?

The Vet FEEPASS year is a facilitated entry to the second year of the BVMS programme. Students who are accepted into the programme will have the opportunity to gain recognition of credits based on assessments completed during the Vet FEEPASS year. During this time, students will be enrolled at the University of Glasgow School of Veterinary Medicine.

Would I need to apply through VMCAS to join the BVMS programme and the Vet FEEPASS year?

No, you will not have to apply through VMCAS to join the BVMS programme. Students who are accepted into the programme will have the opportunity to gain recognition of credits based on assessments completed during the Vet FEEPASS year.